

Fabrics for Performance Shading
Thursday, August 13, 2015 11:30 am - 1:00 pm
Harry's Plaza Café, Santa Barbara

Program

Fabrics for Performance Shading
Presented by Eric Lind

Vice President of Global Specifications, Lutron Electronics

Today, shade fabrics are typically selected based on aesthetics and a designer's past experience, which results in compromised energy savings and occupancy comfort. Research is establishing that fabric properties play a huge role in glare reduction, daylight autonomy, and view preservation. The key to maximizing energy savings and occupancy comfort is finding the right balance between each project's parameters and priorities. This presentation will explain why the shading system is a key component of the building performance system, as opposed to a furnishing, and how to optimize the design of a shading system based on performance and aesthetics.
